Real threat is in Valley

While worrying about Carmel losing its village ambiance, many persons have not seen that the real threat to the village actually involves the jump to develop in Carmel Valley, the "Pine Cone" says in an editorial. Page 2.

Meter ban still in effect

Mandatory water rationing is over, but it does not mean the moratorium on new water meter hook-ups is. The moratorium has held most developments in check in Carmel Valley, but that eventually may change. Those close to the subject say it will take months and possibly years, however. Page 3.

CBA officers inaugurated

At a dinner and dance Friday, the new officers of the Carmel Business Association were installed. Page 5.

'Day in the Life' fashions

Fashions suitable for a "day in the life" of a clubwoman were modeled Monday at a fashion show that marked the 53rd anniversary of the Carmel Woman's Club. Page 8.

He brings down the house

Bassist Gary Karr brought down the house Sunday at King Hall, says music critic Scott MacClelland. His music and humorous antics on stage won raves from the audience. Page 12.

William Ritschel honored

The late William Ritschel, an artist from Carmel Highlands, was honored Saturday when a room in his name was opened at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art. Page 17.

Sick seal is treated

Marine animal specialists are treating a sick baby seal that strayed onto Carmel Beach 12 days ago. Underweight and moulting, "Ralph" is getting antibiotics to cure a skin disease veterinarians say he has. One Carmel woman served as the seal's "babysitter" on Sunday and she was praised by wildlife officials. Page 17.

Carmel voters might have to go to the polls three times in three months as election dates are today. But legislation is pending in Sacramento that would combine two of the elections. Page 22.

Lodge lawyer gets delay in Marriott deliberations

ACTING WITH WHAT was described as too much caution, developers of the proposed Rancho Canada Marriott Lodge asked the Monterey County Board of Supervisors Tuesday to once again continue the public hearing to certify the environmental impact report for the 376-room tennis and golf resort.

Additions to the report from the State Regional Water Quality Control Board and the Monterey County Flood Control District were received less than three days prior to the hearing. The late additions prompted attorney Gerald Dalton, representing Marriott Corp., to ask for the continuance to allow public review.

"I don't want to take my client through this process and through the courts and lose a case on a footnote," said Dalton at the meeting Tuesday. "I ask that the public have a reasonable time to respond."

Although the county counsel said the delay was an example of "excess caution," the supervisors agreed to consider final certification at their meeting Tuesday, Feb. 14, allowing letters of comment from the public until next Monday.

In a letter from the Regional Water Quality Control Board, alternatives to the problem of wastewater disposal were discussed.

"The board has a long-standing policy to minimize the number of independent treatment facilities," wrote Kenneth Jones, the executive officer for the board. "We believe wastewater generated by the development should be discharged into the Carmel Sanitary District's system."

If the sanitary district will not accept discharge during non-peak hours and an on-site system is proposed, waste discharge requirements must be adopted by the regional board, said Jones.

These recommendations were rejected by Kenneth McGinnis, a member of the Carmel Sanitary District board of directors. "We have a 2.4-million-gallon-per-day capacity. Our expansion plans show an increase to 4 million gallons per day by 1980, but it is impossible for us to believe that we will reach that capacity by then.

"We are not going to be able to annex areas until 1982 to 1984. By then, this project would require a new EIR," he said.

THE PROBLEM OF groundwater resources was addressed by R. L. Binder, assistant district engineer for the Monterey County Flood Control District.

"A review of the report on groundwater resources . . . appears to contradict the conclusions of the State Department of Water Resources," said Binder.

"The entire discussion of water resources appears to be irrelevant if the proposed development will use less water than the existing land use (a golf course)."

Public testimony during the hearing criticized the development itself rather than the individual environmental concerns. "The developers have no right to submit plans with an outdated Master Plan," said Douglas Despard, representing the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association.

"The issue of traffic is not adequately studied and proposals for mitigation are not realistic," Despard said. "The EIR is deficient. The only possible mitigation is a reduction in the size of the development."

"Tourists, tourists, tourists — that's the way the trend is now," said Elliott Anderson of Carmel. "We are led to believe the jobs created by this project will help ease the unemployment of this area, but it won't have any effect. People will move here to fill these jobs.

"As far as the sewage problem is concerned, unless the hookup to the Carmel Sanitary District is assured, we will be endangering the health of us all for a group to serve the tourists," Anderson told the board.

JUDGE CARL D. Larson, a member of the Sierra Club, accused the supervisors of a "tendency for slap-dash mitigation."

"You will be judged on the way you handle the environmental impact of this one issue," said Larson. "The environment is beyond politics."

After the meeting, Nick Lombardo, owner of the [illegible] site, complained about the nature of the testimony. "I'm accused of being leftist because these people are so far to the right," said Lombardo.

"The issues that should be addressed now are environmental concerns — not whether a local interest or national corporation is backing this project.

"The issue of increased traffic is out of proportion. When I go to a hotel, I use the airport bus with several others. I don't take my car on every business trip or vacation. People have to realize the change in our society is away from cars on their vacations.

"The Marriott lodge would supply visitors with a golf course right at their hotel — minimizing the need for even rental cars," Lombardo said.

Supervisor Sam Farr of Carmel told citizens speaking at the hearing that "disagreement among experts within an EIR does not make it inadequate."

"This report attempts to interpret what the significant impacts are," said Farr. "On any large project, it is difficult to separate emotion from fact. But this is a function of the law. The EIR should be prepared in order to make a decision on the effects of a project."

Verbal testimony on the hearing has been closed. Written response to additions to the EIR will be accepted at the county offices for review by supervisors at their Feb. 14 meeting.

Goal of Coastal Act may require new traffic pattern in Carmel

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

THE AIMS OF THE California Coastal Act, passed as Prop. 20 in 1972, are not yet fulfilled in Carmel, according to the private consultant who wrote the first draft of the city's local coastal program. All 53 cities and 15 counties along the coast must prepare the programs by 1980, when coastal planning powers are to be relinquished by the state commission the act created.

Before the power is transferred, however, both the state commission and its regional commission must certify that the local programs meet the spirit of the Coastal Act.

Parking and restroom facilities at Carmel Beach are inadequate, said Gregory L. Cory, the consultant from San Francisco. Access to the beach also is limited and may force a study of rerouting traffic through the city, he said. Cory also said that while the Coastal Act requires low-cost services for beach visitors, a Carmel city ordinance prohibits commercial ventures on the beach.

JUST WHAT MAY be done about the identified conflicts remains in question.

Cory said the state could mandate certain changes, but added that it probably will not.

Carmel Planning Director Bob Griggs said state certification of the local coastal program could qualify Carmel for up to $35,000 in state funding to write a Coastal Plan that could eventually replace the city's outdated General Plan.

Les Sternad, a regional coastal planner in Santa Cruz, said problems identified in the program that conflict with the Coastal Act will have to be resolved — but he does not know by what date.

The preliminary draft of problems identified in the local coastal program will go to a public hearing before the City Council later in February, according to Planning Director Bob Griggs. No date has been set for the hearing, however.

Cory, working under a $2,000 contract with the city, compiled the report in December and it was discussed by the Planning Commission on Jan. 25. The commissioners reacted cautiously to the specifics in the report.

Derriere comfort is debated

A crew of armchair "experts" from City Hall have concluded that bottoms need a wide berth.

The "experts" are six members of the Carmel Community and Cultural Commission, who spent almost an hour at a Jan. 24 meeting trying to decide if Carmel residents have typically American derrieres. The commission is taking bids on 150 new chairs for Sunset Center's room 20.

"Studies have shown the American bottom is not comfortable in less than two feet of space," quoth Commissioner Dr. Lewis Heniford.

Sunset Center Director Richard Tyler was directed to seek bids on chairs with removable arms and 24- to 28-inch bottom frames.

What waste?

Dear Editor:

Answering Ms. Sandy Swain's letter criticizing Normandy Inn about wasting water (Pine Cone, Jan 23). In all fairness, let Normandy Inn state its side of the picture.

Since water rationing, new shower heads were installed with restrictors; toilets were changed to use less water; water meters were changed to a gallonage system and records maintained daily; water has been purchased for the swimming pool; all watering has been done by buckets, and due to the notices placed in the rooms, our guests have been most cooperative. We have used less than half of our allotment.

Once a year, it is necessary to scrub the brick patios with sand and water, then hose down to remove the slippery moss as it is a dangerous hazard to our guests, employees and pedestrians. Hopefully, Ms. Swain will understand the use of water that day. It is the vigilance of interested citizens on all fronts that helps us to conserve.

Center praised

Dear Editor:

Question: What private or public endeavor other than the Carmel Youth Center can you name which is open to all age 13 and over at $1 per member per year within its school district and:

- Has been a successful, responsible Carmel tradition for 29 years?
- Is self-supporting?
- Provides young people with off-the-streets activities?
- Has youth-enacted nonpartisan American democracy in action (that may be envied by any city, county, state or national agency)?
- Provides recreation and work for youth in many community and Peninsula-wide activities?
- Has members who have become fine citizens in private and public sectors of society (example: Carmel's present fire chief, first Youth Center president)?
- Has a membership that deeply appreciates the support of sterling citizens?
- Has Mr. Jack Giles, the director, whose example of communication and integrity with one's self, community and world is outstanding in its service to humankind?
- Has the Golden Rule in practice, not preachment?

Answer: None.

As a parent of three wonderful people and members of CYC, I encourage you to join; join also Old Carmel; let your voice be heard at council meetings and anywhere else. I feel our Carmel Youth Center deserves everyone's applause, respect and support (did you work physically hard in or out of rain to provide service at this year's Crosby Pro-Am?). Then we may all continue to enjoy receiving the literally priceless gifts from the center to Carmel and our entire peninsula.

Treaty idea

Dear Editor:

One problem with the Panama Canal treaties that has received little or no notice is the financial aspect.

In this respect, a real ripoff for the U.S. taxpayer may be in the offing. Possibly not until 1999, but that is only 22 years away.

Under the terms of the treaty, we agree to pay Panama about $70 million a year until 1999. This $70 million is to come from canal tolls.

Not mentioned in the treaty is paying back to the U.S. the unamortized debt of $550 million which is owed by the Panama Canal Co. The interest and amortization on this debt is about $30 million a year. Thus, the canal would have to produce $100 million a year more in earnings than it now yields.

Tolls were raised 43 per cent in 1974. No study has been made since as to how much more tolls can be raised without driving traffic to other competitive routes. Traffic studies should have been made before payments to Panama were specified in a treaty and thus set into concrete, so to speak. Governor Parfitt, in his testimony, stated no such studies had been made.

The Panama Commission which will be operating the canal if the treaties are approved by the Senate is a U.S. government agency. If the commission runs a deficit due to the specified payments to Panama, Congress will have to make the deficit good by loans or grants.

This gift of the canal to Panama which has a replacement cost of $3.5 billion may entail annual payments out of the U.S. Treasury. It's worth asking who among those urging approval of the treaties stands to gain.

The Library of Congress has reported that Chase Manhattan, Marine Midland, National City and other banks have loans to Panama, incurred by Torrijos, of $1.7 billion. Thirty-nine per cent of Panama's revenue is needed now in meeting annual charges on these loans. These treaties will bail the banks out of these precarious loans and shift the burden to the U.S. taxpayer. It's time we found out what is behind the push to ratify the treaties.

A simpler solution comes to mind. Why not transfer the canal to Panama for operation on a business-like basis with Panama receiving the assets and assuming the obligations to pay back loans to the U.S.? Defense of the canal could be assured by our retaining necessary military bases.

Endorsement

Dear Editor:

We have a business in Carmel, but more important, we chose to live here because of the very unique character of Carmel and its unsurpassed natural beauty and charm. We want this to continue unspoiled regardless of any business considerations.

For this reason, we support Howard Brunn for City Council, who has proven many times in the past he has the best interests of Carmel at heart, and also the re-election of Mike Brown and Helen Arnold, who have demonstrated by their hard work and votes that they also wish to preserve our beloved home and village against the pressures that beset us continuously. Good luck to the defenders of Old Carmel.

Dear Editor:

Since we have an election for three councilmen for our town, I would like to express my full support for Howard Brunn, whom I have known for over 50 years. Howard Brunn is a man who takes an active interest in our town, which is in need of an active councilman who has shown in his many activities that he has great interest in improving many conditions which need improvement.

Yes, Carmel has to be protected from overdevelopment of the commercial activities. There is no town in all America of such a small size where musical and theatrical productions have such a high standard, not to forget the beauty of the place which is known all over the globe.

So my dear reader, please keep this in mind and vote for Howard Brunn at the coming election for councilman of Carmel on March 7.

Valley in peril

By AL EISNER

WHILE SAVORING a bowl of clam chowder at Flaherty's the other day, I chatted with Susan (Mrs. Flaherty) Swanston about business conditions in the village. We briefly discussed the candidates for the City Council election

While we were gabbing, a nicely dressed middle-aged couple seated nearby was devouring the whole conversation. The lady, who just couldn't wait to tell us how she felt, said, "I know I'm from out of town, and I don't really have a right to speak, but we love Carmel. We've been coming here for 20 years. Please don't let it get too big."

Like most people, including many local residents, she was not aware that Carmel comprised only one square mile. She was most unhappy about the mushrooming commercial development at the mouth of Carmel Valley and was surprised to hear that it was not part of the city of Carmel. I advised her that it was under the jurisdiction of Monterey County. She was not reassured, because her vision of "Carmel" included Carmel Valley, Pebble Beach and even Big Sur.

THE ALARM that has been expressed over the future of the commercial district of Carmel pales before the threat posed to the lovely Valley just east of the city.

Carmel Valley awaits like a ripe virgin the onslaught of the greedy developers who would gladly pave it over for a fast buck.

Thousands of residential and resort units are in various stages of planning and approval. With the lifting of water rationing, the relentless push for premature growth will continue — even though it appears that the Public Utilities Commission will not remove the moratorium on the issuance of water meters for another year or so.

Based on the actions of the Board of Supervisors last week, there is little hope that environmentally oriented residents will set any succor from their county officials until we get a new board of supervisors.

In one action, the board granted an appeal for a subdivision in Robles del Rio from a Planning Commission decision that cited problems concerning slope, water, traffic problems, as well as the fact that the Carmel Valley Master Plan is currently being revised. The board, which has three members from the Salinas Valley, swept aside the Planning Commission decision and gave the green light to the developer.

In another decision, the board refused to adopt a policy on managed growth that also was recommended by the Planning Commission. The policy was based on exhaustive studies by the League of Women Voters. A subcommittee was appointed by the supervisors to "study" the matter to death and hope it will go away.

THE PLAIN FACT is that the majority of the board doesn't give a darn about managing growth. They worship the long-discarded policy that "progress and growth are good . . . broaden the tax base, etc. . . ."

It was Supervisor Edwin Norris from Salinas who said about a year ago at a hearing on an important land-use question: "There are too many controls on property rights now. We're abusing property owners. They should be able to do whatever they want with their property. As a matter of fact, I would approve the construction of anything in Carmel Valley with the possible exception of a tanning factory."

First District Supervisor Kenneth Blohm, a retired judge who frequently snoozes through important board meetings, said flatly that he would like to abolish all zoning.

Third District Supervisor Dusan Petrovic from South County has occasionally responded to the cries of anguished citizens — but only when they turn out in force.

How refreshing it was, then, to talk with Barbara Shipnuck, the gallant lady who is challenging Norris for his seat in the 2nd District. She wants to make the members of the board more accessible and more responsive to the people. She wants to help create carefully managed growth. She will not rubber-stamp every development proposal that comes before the board.

I SHARE the view of many others that the Water Management Agency acted prematurely last week when it voted to end water rationing. The "Pacific High" that diverted dozens of rain-bearing storms from California these past two years may have come back. While the dams are spilling and the river is once again flowing, do we have any assurance that we will have unusually heavy rainfall next year? Has anyone certified that the Carmel River aquifer has indeed been recharged?

It seems to me that activists who may have turned their attention to other matters while temporarily protected by water rationing had better turn their energies once again to Carmel Valley.

Hearing Monday to debate C-2 residential transition

MONDAY night at 8 p.m. the Carmel City Council will consider amending the General Plan to include a residential R-4 district within the city.

But the two authors of the original minority report that sought to change the light commercial C-2 zone, Junipero between Third and Sixth, to a residential R-4 zone now disagree about what the R-4 zone should include.

Planning Commissioners Dr. Donald Davidson and Leslie Gross split their votes on the conditional uses that would be allowable in the proposed R-4 zone at a Jan. 25 special meeting of the commission.

Gross wanted to increase the number of approved conditional uses in the proposed zone. Davidson did not. Instead, he wanted to reduce the area where the new R-4 zoning would apply.

The special session was requested by Davidson, who said the current R-4 proposal, if applied to the C-2 zone, was unfair to small businesses. He said it "steered away from the big guys, but forgot the little guys."

THE R-4 proposal would permit motels to remain if they opened before Jan. 1, 1967. Many so-called "residentially oriented" businesses, however, would need to obtain use permits from the Carmel Board of Adjustments.

On a motion from Gross, the Planning Commission voted 5-2 to add eight new conditional uses to the current list of 17. Davidson and Dorothea Roberts, the commission chairman, voted against the additions. Roberts said she dissented because she opposed the R-4 concept. Voting for the new conditions were Commissioners Gross, Robert Stephenson, Sandy Swain, Eileen Thompson and Manfred Prescott.

The new conditional uses include offices for architects, attorneys, building contractors, building designers, interior decorators, plumbing and heating contractors, public accountants and shoe repair. In December, the commissioners added medical and dental offices to the conditional list.

The original list also included bakeries, barber shops, beauty shops, cleaners, laundries, food stores, hardware stores, building materials, consumer goods lockers, pharmacies, veterinarians, locksmiths, nursing homes, rest homes, scientific research facilities and horticultural nurseries.

MORE OF the C-2 zone should be changed to a light commercial C-1-S designation before rezoning the area R-4, Davidson said.

Davidson's proposal confused Gross, who told him, "I'm trying to find out where in the heck you are coming from."

The upcoming public hearing was called to debate the addition of an R-4 zone to the General Plan. A separate hearing is scheduled Feb. 14 for debate on ordinances to establish an R-4 zone.

A new zoning category cannot be adopted officially until it is incorporated in the General Plan, according to City Attorney George Brehmer.

The addition to the General Plan would read: "An R-4 zone is proposed to be established within the city which will allow for additional residential uses with limited commercial activity. The zone is proposed to replace lands zoned commercial to provide a buffer zone between the residential and commercial districts."

Salinas mother to oppose Supervisor Edwin Norris

A 35-YEAR-OLD Salinas mother of two children is challenging Monterey County Supervisor Edwin Norris for his 2nd District seat.

Barbara Shipnuck, former president of the League of Women Voters of Salinas, announced her candidacy last week. She was introduced to a group of potential supporters at a private gathering in a Carmel Valley home on Sunday.

BARBARA SHIPNUCK, announced election opponent of Supervisor Edwin Norris of Salinas, crosses "over the hill" to stump in the Carmel and Carmel Valley areas.

Mrs. Shipnuck, who is a credentialed school teacher, is a part-time law clerk and researcher. She is enrolled as a second-year student at the Monterey College of Law.

"Government in Monterey County has moved too far away from the people," she said. "Citizens should be encouraged to participate and should know that when they do, they will be heard and not ignored. I would encourage them and I would listen," she said.

Mrs. Shipnuck said, "The board has become so polarized that it is pulling away from the public."

She said many citizens are being "turned off" to participation in the process because they have been rebuffed so many times. "He's always going to vote against my wishes, so why should I bother?" is the attitude many disappointed petitioners are adopting, she added.

"People have a preconceived notion of which supervisors they can talk to. The supervisors should not be unapproachable. I'd like to have a hand in changing the atmosphere," she said.

Mrs. Shipnuck added: "There needs to be someone on the board who is willing to hear views from all sides. I want to hear from people in or out of my district."

No early end seen to meter ban

By DIANE VALESKA

DESPITE THE move last week to voluntary water rationing, new development in Carmel Valley is still impeded by a moratorium on new water meter hookups — and it may be months or even years before the ban is lifted.

An end to the moratorium is "a long way down the line," a state Public Utilities Commission spokesman said, unless a local agency or individual is successful in petitioning for an end to the ban on new water hookups. The ban also applies to new water mains.

But a survey of Monterey Peninsula agencies and a key representative of developers shows they are not yet prepared to make such a petition, and even if they were, the process could be lengthy and involved.

"There is a significant legislative hearing lag before such petitions are reviewed by the PUC," said Leslie Kelsay, public information officer for the California-American Water Co. "It's a long process and can take forever. For example, it can take two years for a rate increase to be approved or even considered."

A petition to have the PUC review case No. 9530, which halted new connections by Cal-Am on July 15, 1975, could be made by a public agency, a private individual or group or the PUC itself.

But an end to the drought will not affect the criteria the PUC requires in order to lift the moratorium.

"Most of the problem has little to do with the drought," said Bruce Kennedy, the spokesman for the PUC.

"The [illegible] in effect is a lack of water storage facilities in the Peninsula area. Until more water sources are located and treatment facilities constructed, it will be quite a while before the moratorium is lifted," he predicted.

WE WILL not petition for an end to the moratorium at this time," said Harold Boudreau, administrator for the Monterey Peninsula Water Management Agency. "Twice with the aquifer and dams full, the PUC has ordered a continuance on the ban for new water hookups. They are looking for us to supply new sources of water."

This week, the Cal-Am board of directors in Los Angeles will consider a recommendation to drill four new wells and construct an iron-removal plant at the west end of Carmel Valley. "Those wells could provide 16 acre-feet a day more water," said Boudreau. "This would be a significant additional source of water for the Peninsula."

This proposed project also would have to be reviewed by the PUC. Again, the lag at the PUC staff level could force local water agencies to wait a year or more for approval of an environmental impact report, permits to build plus the actual construction time.

The Canada de la Segunda Pipeline and Begonia Iron-Removal Plant, scheduled to be in operation by April 1, began environmental studies in 1971 when a use permit was granted by the Monterey County Planning Commission. A building permit was issued for that project in September 1975 and construction is now nearing completion.

That same process would be required for the construction of a second iron-removal plant in the Valley. "We would have to be nearing completion of such a project in order to meet the PUC requirements for more water sources," said Boudreau. "Until then, there is not much chance with the PUC to lift the moratorium."

The Canada de la Segunda Pipeline will carry well water from Carmel Valley to the Cal-Am distribution system in Seaside. But it will transport water from the same source used in the past — the Carmel Valley aquifer. The Begonia treatment plant is supposed to provide Cal-Am with sufficient water-treatment capacity to allow the existing Carmel Valley wells to be used at capacity.

IF THE four new wells and treatment plant are approved by the Cal-Am board, they could provide a real hedge against future droughts," said Richard Sullivan, vice president and general manager of the company. "The PUC in July 1975 said it would lift the water meter freeze at the earliest possible date. At that time, they said they would review the moratorium when contracts were let on the Begonia plant project. But last May, when the contracts were let, we were at the height of the drought and the case was not considered.

"The drought is over, for this year. With rationing, we have confirmed what we can do," he said.

Carl Hooper, of Bestor Engineers Inc., a civil engineering firm in Monterey, said he, as an individual, would not petition the PUC, but several of his developer-clients may consider petitioning for an end to the meter ban.

"I see no justification for delay in lifting this ban on meters for existing lots and new developments that do not require main extensions," said Hooper. "Once the Begonia Iron-Removal Plant is ready, it would take at least a year for any new development to be ready to build."

SINGLE-FAMILY dwellings where the builder will be the occupant have obtained permission from the PUC to obtain water hook-ups. Here in Carmel Valley, a trench has been dug in anticipation of a water line to be laid to two nearly completed houses. Most larger developments, however, must await the lifting of the moratorium on new water meter connections. (George T. C. Smith photo)

Van Crego, 14, to be promoted to Eagle

Van Crego, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur V. Crego of Carmel, will receive his Eagle Scout award at a ceremony Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Carmel Scout House, Eighth and Mission.

Van, 14, is a student at Carmel Middle School and has been in scouting since 1972, when he entered as a Cub Scout in Carmel Pack 48.

He is only the second Scout in Carmel Troop 3 to earn the Eagle Award. In achieving the award, he earned 24 merit badges and has completed an Eagle community service project by planting seedlings in Mission Trail Park.

Van earned the Arrow of Light Award, Cub Scouting's highest award, in 1974. He joined Boy Scout Troop 32 in October 1974, where he served as a patrol leader.

A new Scout troop was organized in Carmel in August 1976 and Van became a patrol leader and instructor in addition to serving as a Cub Scout den chief.

VAN CREGO, 14, of Carmel, due to be elevated to Eagle Scout on Wednesday.

Carmel store manager wrestles with suspect

A 23-year-old Carmel leather goods store manager wrestled a suspected shoplifter long enough Saturday so police could arrive and arrest the suspect. Three alleged partners were later arrested in Seaside, according to police.

David L. Ammon, manager of the Big Sur Craftsmen, Ocean and San Carlos, was credited by police for detaining suspect Ronald Beverly Warren, 24, of Fort Ord, who was charged with grand theft and possession of stolen property.

Ammon observed the alleged shoplift attempt and summoned police. Ammon attempted to detain Warren but the suspect allegedly hit Ammon in the chest. When the suspect attempted to flee to a waiting car, Ammon wrestled the man to the ground. Police arrived at 4:50 p.m.

The waiting car drove off, but a witness supplied police with a license number of a car, later stopped by police in Seaside. A new coat, reported stolen earlier on Saturday from the store, was found on the car floor, and two adults and one youth were charged with possession of stolen property.

Adults arrested were Reggie Lamon Toler, 18, and Rickey Leneer Lacy, 22, both of Seaside. The identity of the juvenile was not given.

Ammon told police that Warren tried to conceal three allegedly stolen leather jackets under his raincoat. He said he was suspicious of Warren because it was a warm day.

The three men and the juvenile also were charged with possession of two coats reported stolen from the same store earlier that afternoon.

Coastal Act

that the state might mandate rerouting traffic through the residential neighborhoods. She also feared new parking stipulations.

Commissioner Sandy Swain worried about required recreational provisions for nonresidents. "I hope residents of Carmel can design the atmosphere they want," she said.

Commissioner Dr. Donald Davidson said he was concerned about whether the Coastal Commission could "override wishes of the residential population."

SHORELINE ACCESS is the state commission's primary concern, according to Cory. The Coastal Act was intended to protect the California shoreline for public use. That aim represents no problem for Carmel, Cory said last week.

"Carmel is significantly ahead of most communities in providing visitor access to the beach," Cory told the Planning Commission. But he added, in his report, "Visitor access to the beach is limited. The question of rerouting the traffic flow to gain greater access should be investigated."

The city has no interest in rerouting traffic through its residential areas, Mrs. Roberts said. It probably will not have to reroute, Cory answered. Compared to most cities, Carmel offers better visitor access to its beach, he said the day after the meeting.

Last year, the State Coastal Commission exempted much of Carmel from the building permit requirements of the Coastal Act.

Only homes on Carmel's beach area and second-floor apartments in the city require Coastal Commission certification, according to Griggs, the city planning director.

The second-floor apartments are required to provide two parking spaces. The beach homes must receive Coastal Commission approval before construction or performing most exterior improvements.

Carmel is the only city entirely within the state Coastal Zone, "and the only city with an exclusion of this type," Cory said.

SITMAR TO ACAPULCO

NOW SAVE $200.

Save $200 per couple on the vacation of a lifetime—Sitmar's 11-day April 8th or 10-day April 19th Acapulco cruises.

More time aboard and ashore

You'll sail aboard the Liberian-registered T.S.S. Fairsea to sunny Puerto Vallarta, Mazatlan, and Cabo San Lucas. The 11-day cruise even goes to the remote beaches of Zihuatanejo/Ixtapa. And both cruises give you plenty of time in Acapulco. In fact, the April 8th cruise stops in Acapulco for a full day and a half—enough time for an optional tour to Mexico City.

Prices start at only $710.

The price is incomparable. And so is Sitmar's Air/Sea Program. You'll fly aboard a regularly scheduled airline to board ship. And in most cases, you can stopover after the cruise to visit or sightsee. (This program available in categories "L" and above.)

So save $200 on Sitmar's April 8th or April 19th Acapulco cruises. And have a great time in the bargain.

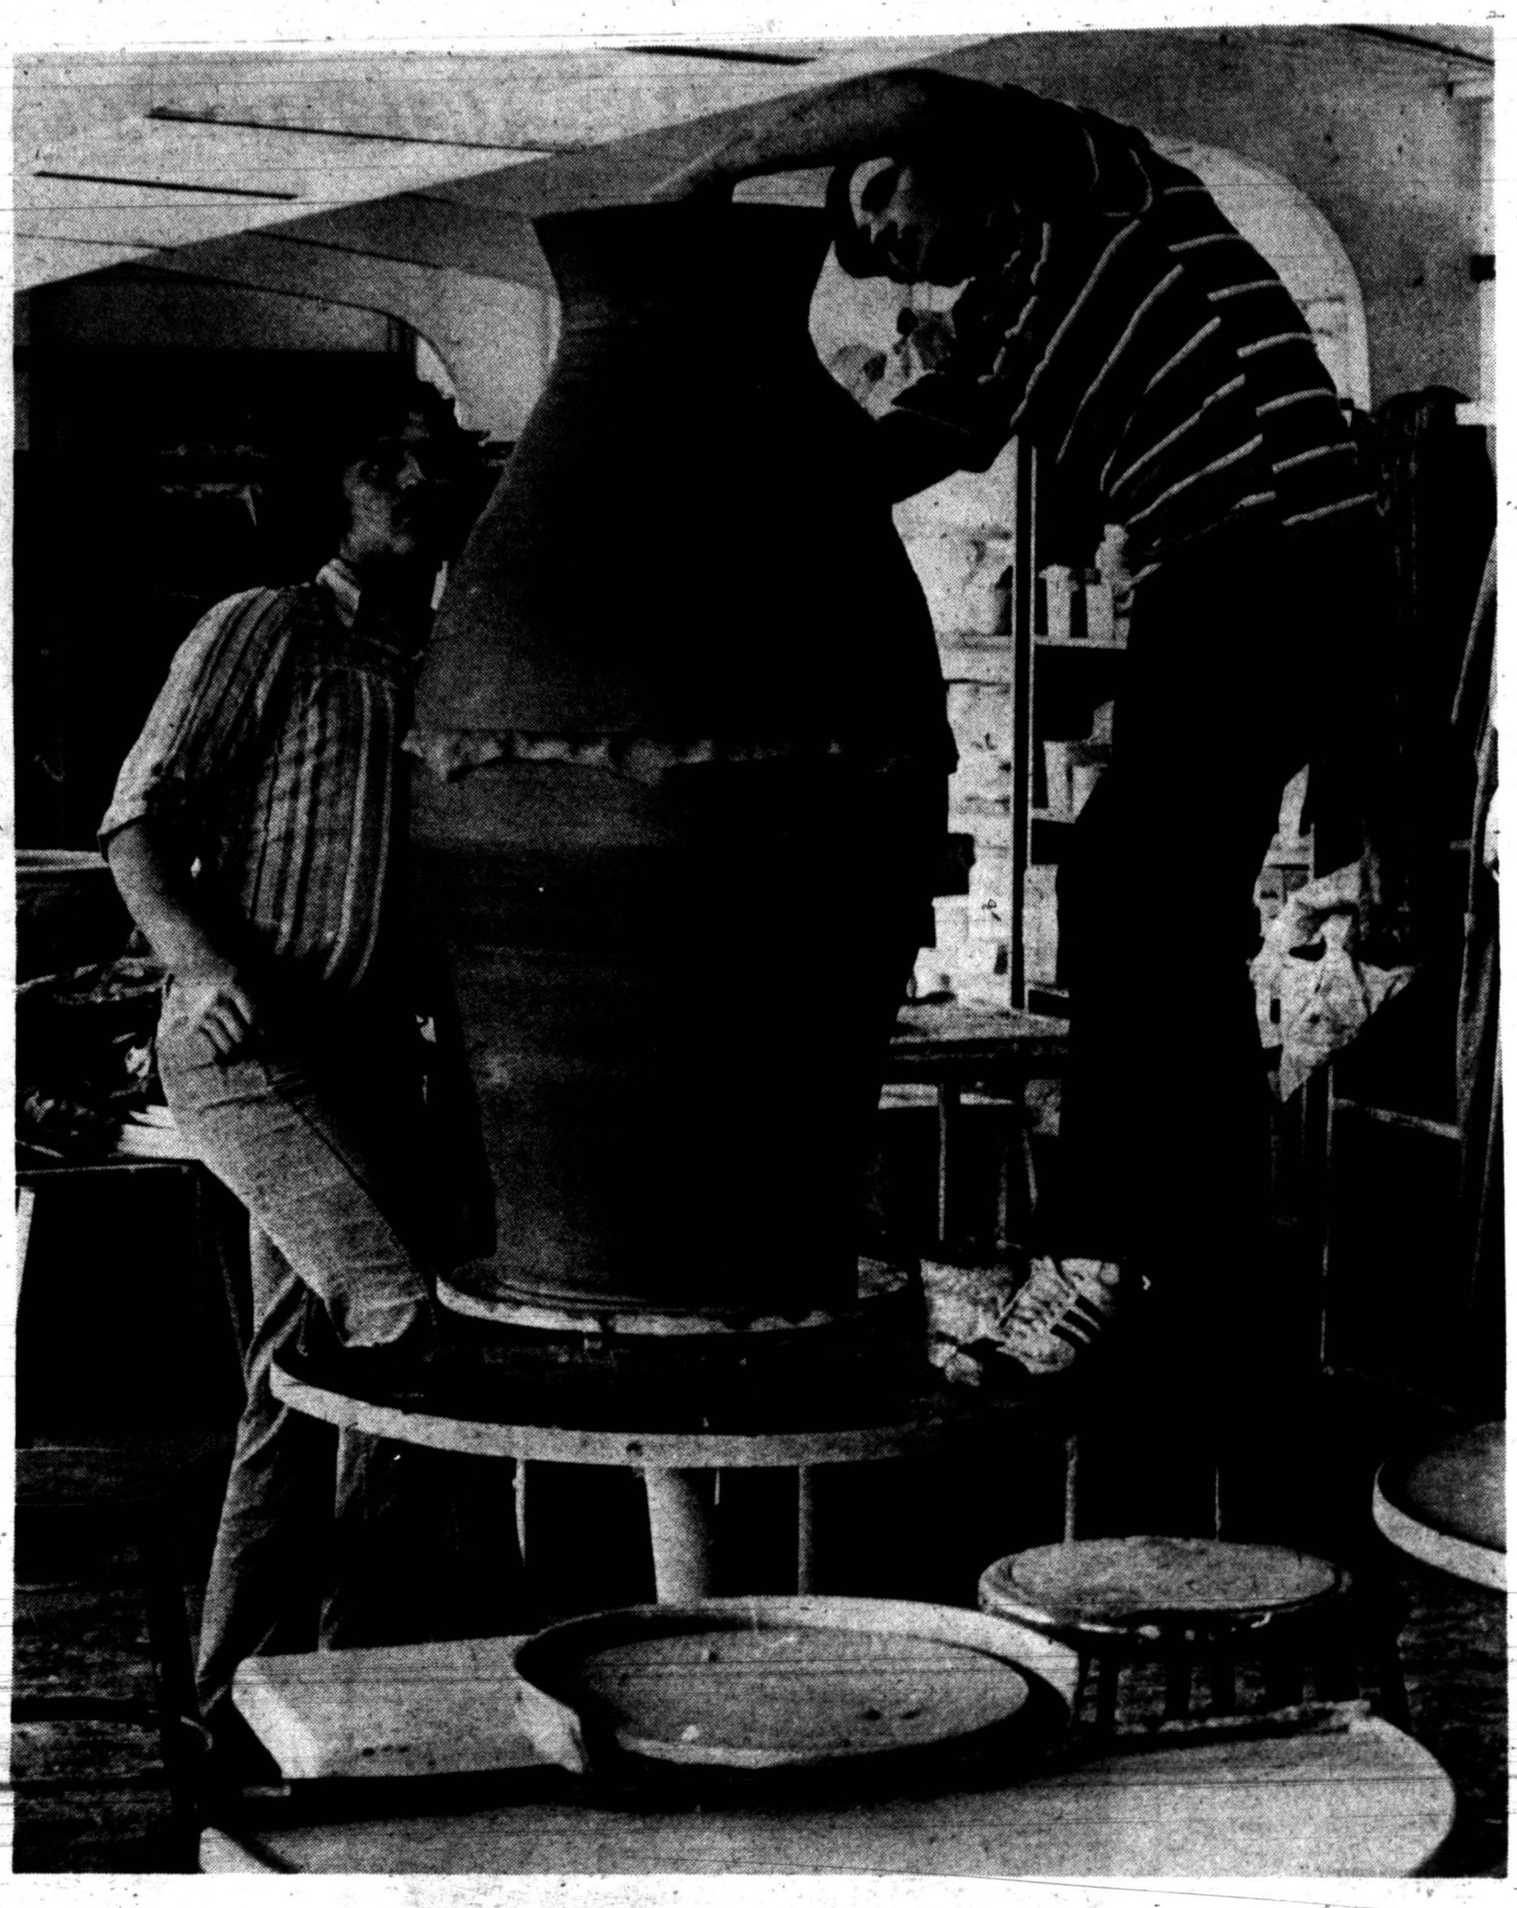
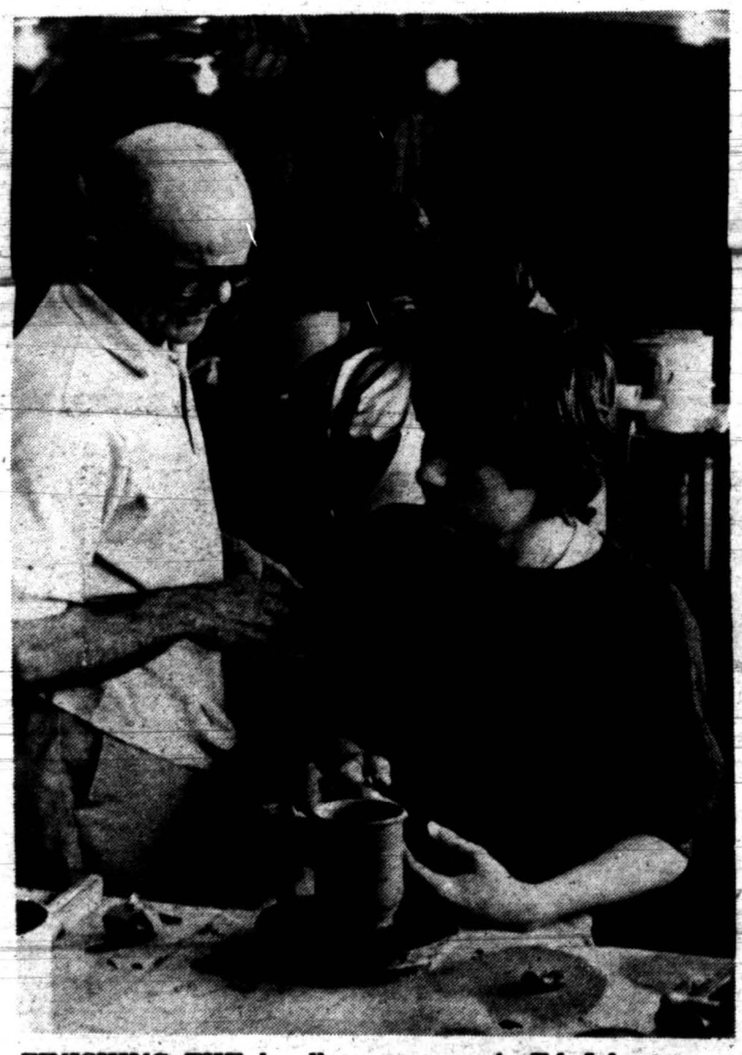
Job for two men



REACHING BEYOND the normal limitations of size with their creation are Michael Careaga (left) and Steve Shabram, both seniors at Carmel High School. The pair has spent more than 30 hours working together on the coil vase which measures four feet in height. (George T. C. Smith photos)



One Step

WORKING A POTTER'S wheel is just one step in the process of creating an object from a piece of clay. Here Lincoln Hutchins, a sophomore, centers his clay on the wheel.

FINISHING THE handle on a mug is Ed Johnston, a sophomore. With simple direction from teacher Lloyd Baskerville (left), students learn to create their own ideas.

The potters of Baskerville

Taking a lump of earth and transforming it into an object of their own design, students at Carmel High School experience creativity in the pottery classes taught by Lloyd Baskerville.

"I don't try to teach them the techniques of pottery," said Baskerville, a 20-year veteran of teaching at Carmel High School. "What I do is provide the atmosphere for individuals to use their own ideas. Somehow, they learn the basics as they go along."

Throughout the school day, as many as 25 to 35 students at a time work together to design their clay projects. The pottery shed is located at the rear of the school, offering a physical as well as mental break from the regular classroom.

"The conditions are anything but ideal," said Baskerville, "but it works. It gives them a chance to allow the subconscious to take over. The mind watches what the hands do."

Seniors Michael Careaga and Steve Shabram are reaching beyond the limits of the size of a kiln as they construct a four-foot-high vase. By building their project in two pieces, they will be able to fire it in one of the school kilns at 2,185 degrees.

But the size of the project does not determine the amount of creativity needed. "The effect can be just as rewarding from a tea cup," said Baskerville.

NO PRE-SHOW jitters were apparent in this trio of models. They are Mrs. Don E. Harrison Jr., Mrs. J. L. Dujmovich and Barbara Patchell.

'Day in the Life of a Clubwoman' fashion show at Woman's Club

To celebrate the 53rd anniversary of its founding, the Carmel Woman's Club staged a fashion show, "A Day in the Life of a Clubwoman," on Monday featuring its members as the models.

The array of fashions — ensembles appropriate for various occasions in a woman's day — were supplied by Nell's Plum Tree and the Silver Thimble.

An audience of 150 sipped tea and watched the 11 women model the latest in women's apparel. Mrs. Edward Griffith was the chairman of the fashion show. She was assisted by Mrs. T. W. Imlay.

The tea and fashion show commemorated the founding of the club on Dec. 6, 1925, at the Pine Inn in Carmel. There were 55 charter members. Twenty years later, the club bought two lots at Ninth and San Carlos. Construction of the clubhouse, where the fashion show took place, was completed in January 1949.

Decorations for the event were supplied by Mrs. Lloyd Test. Mrs. Roland Scheffler, fashion coordinator for the show, also was the commentator. The models were:

Mrs. Edward E. Best, Elizabeth Christiansen, Mrs. W. L. Balestri, Mrs. Thomas Hardy, Mrs. H. J. Hoy, Barbara Patchell, Mrs. W. H. Schuyler, Mrs. Don A. McLean, Mrs. H. W. Stewart, Mrs. J. L. Dujmovich and Mrs. Don E. Harrison Jr.

Pouring tea at the show were Dr. Dorothy Danno, the club president, Mrs. Thaddeus Krecki, Mrs. John Bissell and Wilhemina Klein. They were assisted by Mrs. Rolf Ullstead, Mrs. I. Norman Downer and Mrs. T. W. Imlay. Mrs. Donald B. Walker was in charge of door prizes.

No jitters

FLASHING a grin as she strode through the audience was Mrs. Don E. Harrison Jr.

Salinas mother to oppose Norris

major issues in her district, Mrs. Shipnuck said, since most of the population of the district is in Salinas. Those questions are taken care of by the Salinas municipal government. Health care services and property taxes are the main concerns of voters in her district, she said.

"The cost of county government must be related to the actual services delivered to the people and not to the number of reams of paper it produced.

"Quality health care must continue to be delivered by Natividad Medical Center. The Board of Supervisors must become a more effective bridge between the private and public medical communities," she said.

In the field of juvenile justice, Mrs. Shipnuck said: "It is necessary to place greater emphasis on programs of prevention rather than detention. There are state funds available for this purpose which have not been requested."

To battle-weary residents of the Carmel and Carmel Valley areas, Mrs. Shipnuck's views on land use and planning are of primary concern. Supervisor Norris, along with the two other supervisors from "over the hill," have frequently overridden the County Planning Commission and given approval to developments in the Carmel-Carmel Valley area over the vehement protests of the residents and of Sam Farr, the supervisor representing the area.

Mrs. Shipnuck favors a policy of balanced growth that would preserve prime agricultural land. "We also have to take into account where the water is. Just because it rained for eight or nine weeks does not mean the problem of water supply has been solved," she said.

"We also have to take into account the housing needs of the people who live in the county now.

"If we work in those areas with an awareness of environmental factors, then I feel it will help encourage those people who feel they will lose their jobs because of planning," she added.

While Mrs. Shipnuck avoided comment on specific land use questions, she said she disagreed with the vote taken just last week on approval of a subdivision in the Robles del Rio area of Carmel Valley. It was approved 3-2 on appeal from denial by the Planning Commission.

"I would have voted against it," she declared. "What concerned me was that it amended the General Plan while a new Master Plan for the Valley is being formulated. The board has to come to grips with getting the Master Plan in conformity with zoning.

"The Planning Commission and the board are working against each other. It's an unhealthy situation," she added.

Mrs. Shipnuck pointed out that the election will be held in November if no other candidates come forward in the district. This is a change from the past, when a primary was held in June even if only two candidates were in contention.

MRS. SHIPNUCK was born and raised in New York. She attended elementary, junior and senior high schools in the city and received a BA from Brandeis University. She also holds an MA in education from Harvard University.

Before she started teaching in 1964, she had various summer and part-time jobs as a library assistant, youth counselor and clerical assistant. She taught at Columbia Grammar School in New York from 1964 to 1967 and from 1968 to 1970 at North Salinas High School.

In addition to her service as an officer of the League of Women Voters, Mrs. Shipnuck was a member of the Education Task Force of the League in 1975-76. She was a member of the committee that organized Senior Citizens Crime Prevention and Consumer Protection Conferences in 1974 in Monterey and Salinas. She was chairman of the 1973-74 Study of Consumerism in Monterey County for the LWV, and in 1973, was cochairman of the Monterey County Consumer Affairs Committee.

She is a member of the Juvenile Justice Commission; chairwoman of the Religious School at Temple Beth El; finance director of the LWV of Salinas; a member of the Parents' Club Board at University Park School; a member of the Women's Health Task Force; and a member of the Steering Committee of Monterey College of Law Women's Association.

Her husband, David, is an instructor in economics at Hartnell College. They have two children: Louisa, 7, and Alan, 4.

WHY DID Mrs. Shipnuck decide to run for County Board of Supervisors?

"It was my concern for the growing feeling of helplessness among the people in the county. People want to know: 'Will you listen to us?' instead of ignoring them entirely. You can't ride roughshod over the wishes of the people.

"It's a job, and the people are my employers. I will have to be accountable to them," she added.

The present board of supervisors is comprised of:

- 1st District (North County), Kenneth Blohm
- 2nd District (Salinas area), Edwin Norris
- 3rd District (South County), Dusan Petrovic
- 4th District (Monterey Peninsula), Michal Moore
- 5th District (Carmel, Carmel Valley, South Coast), Sam Farr

Supervisors confirm commission appointee

County Supervisor Sam Farr's nomination of a Pacific Grove geologist to the Monterey County Planning Commission was confirmed Tuesday by the County Board of Supervisors. The vote was unanimous.

Paul F. Patchick, 48, must file a financial disclosure statement and wait 10 days before being sworn to the commission. The position had been held until six months ago by Edward Whitaker, who resigned. Farr can appoint two members to the nine-seat commission. His other appointee is William G. Peters.

Patchick's opinion about controlled growth is regarded as suitable to Farr, an outspoken advocate of planned development on the board of supervisors. The nomination was announced Tuesday morning.

In a prepared statement, Patchick said, "Engineers and architects can set the safe limits for seating in an auditorium or an elevator, so why can't county planners decide the holding capacity of an area based on its water, air and space supplies?"

He is a senior partner in the geologic consulting firm of Shaw, Patchick and Associates. Previously, Patchick was a principal engineer with Honeywell Inc., in Minneapolis, Minn. He also has worked as a hydrogeologist with Edward E. Johnson Inc., a consulting firm. Patchick was a consultant on geologic hazards at new building sites while the assistant city geologist with the Los Angeles County administration.

Patchick has a master's degree from the University of Southern California and a bachelor's degree from UCLA. His wife, Nellie Jane, is the head librarian at Carmel High School. The Patchicks have lived on the Peninsula since 1967.

Farr said Patchick was one of 50 persons who applied for the part-time post. It pays $150 a month.

'I'm not Byron'

Carmel's last cafeteria-style restaurant was given permission to add 30 seats at a Jan. 25 Board of Adjustments meeting. The vote was 7-0.

Byron and Schiller, located in the Carmel Plaza, presently has seating for 40. Owner Gary Amerigian said the additional space was needed to accommodate "those who live and work in Carmel."

Commissioner Robert Stephenson suspected something amiss on the restaurant use permit when the names Byron and Schiller were not listed as owners. "Who are they?" he demanded.

"Byron is my favorite poet and Schiller is my favorite philosopher," Amerigian answered.

First definitive book since Prohibition repeal

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

"Glory, the grape, love, gold — in these are sunk the hopes of all men and of every nation."

— Lord Byron (1788-1824)

THE STUDY of grapes and wine, linked as it is with the history of civilization, is quite apt to engage the novice with such fascination that he is caught in the tendrils of the vine for the rest of his life. Such a one, however, would be in very good company — of souls like Francis Bacon, William Shakespeare, Emerson, Dumas, on and on, to Ernest Hemingway and Clifton Fadiman, all articulate men inspired by the glory of the grape. Nor does it take very profound research to begin tracing the vine through history. For instance:

The vineyards of La Romanee are today affixed with the name of the Prince de Conti as evidence of the ambitious reach of the noble prince who bested Madame de Pompadour, mistress of Louis XV. The ruby wine from Pinot noir grapes of Burgundy is always linked with the name of Napoleon, who called Chambertin his favorite wine. Regiments of the French army always salute the vineyards of 12th-century Clos de Vougeot when they pass. Talleyrand was once the proud owner of Chateau Haut-Brion of Graves, which is today the pride of the Clarence Dillon family, and, once more, traditions of great wealth.

The revered vineyards of Europe belong to the hallowed past. There are stony fields in Greece still yielding vines which inspired the thoughts of Aeschylus to enduring truth: "Bronze is the mirror of the form; wine, of the heart." We even have surviving hieroglyphs from amphorae found in King Tutankhamen's tomb denoting specific, fine regional, township and estate vineyards which would satisfy for quality standards the most ardent wine legislator of our day.

WE WERE PUT onto these thoughts by the publication of a new book. The Great Wine Grapes and the Wines They Make by Bern C. Ramey is wholly a work of love. It's a big, handsome volume, 13½ by 10 inches, 256 pages of 80-pound natural vellum stock, with a preface by Maynard A. Amerine, professor emeritus of enology at UC Davis. It is the first comprehensive ampelography (descriptive study and evaluation of wine-grape varieties) to appear since Repeal moved our country into the present Golden Age of Wines. As author Ramey states in his introduction, "It seemed strange that the source or starting point of all these vinous treasures — the grape — remained largely ignored."

THAT VOID is filled with Ramey's book, which is more than a dry scholastic textbook. It roams the centuries of history, with the kind of perspective that makes tasting the wine a more dimensional experience. The text covers 16 white and 14 red wine varieties, each illustrated with superb full-color photographs of clusters taken at optimum maturity from the UC Davis experimental vineyards. These pictures, taken over a three-year period, have the beauty of botanical engravings, suitable for framing. The photographer was Ramey's son, Timothy B. Ramey, working with Professor Lloyd A. Lider, of the department of viticulture and enology, who wrote the viticultural profiles of the text.

For a copy of the limited first edition, write to: Great Wine Grapes, Box 964, Burlingame 94010, enclosing your check for $37.50 per book, plus sales taxes where they apply, and $1.50 per book for postage and handling.

Ramey has been involved in the many facets of the wine world all his adult life. He is a graduate of UC Davis, had a winery of his own in the Midwest and is a charter member of the American Society of Enologists. Presently, he is a vice president of Browne Vintners, the wine division of the Seagram Co. It's not probable that Ramey will earn much "gold" from this beautifully delineated love of the "grape," but for those of us who enjoy the "glory" that comes with occasional wonderful bottles of wine, he earns an enduring share of it with this good book.

Bassist Gary Karr brings the house down

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

IN THEIR THIRD concert of the season, the Monterey County Symphony and conductor Haymo Taeuber have presented one of their finest achievements to date. Not only was the program rich in its diversity but it featured two stars, virtuoso bassist Gary Karr and composer Harold Peterson. And how the stars did shine. Karr not only is a master of his enormous Amati bass, but is also a radiant and charming stage presence. Peterson's new symphony is a generously musical work that is a true complement to our orchestra's musicians.

The performance Sunday at King Hall opened with Copland's Fanfare for the Common Man for brass and percussion. The brass choir stood to play it and the work's exposed writing only slightly revealed some insecurities among the players. It is a most demanding piece and must be frightening as a concert opener.

Karr then joined the orchestra, with instrument held aloft so as not to mow down the violinists, and presented the Contrabass Concerto in A by Dragonetti, himself a virtuoso bassist in the early 19th century. This three-movement work is not only a vehicle for awesome technical display, but features an elegant and even noble first movement and a lovely singing slow movement. For the most part, the orchestra plays in a deep tessitura and, of course, is held back so as not to drown out the solo instrument. When the orchestra began the last movement, its rollicking rhythm instantly set Karr to swaying along. This was when the pyrotechnics began and when Karr's sense of humor took over. After abundant virtuosity through the developing piece, we were then brought to a solo cadenza that boggled the mind. Karr danced the entire range of the instrument and plunged fearlessly through the maze of flying arpeggios, harmonics, double stops and the like. Then came a pizzicato section in which Karr made the bass sound like a lute. In turn he careened back into speed-of-sound bow and finger work, and then turned clown, crossing his feet, grinning from ear to ear, and bobbing his head in a vigorous affirmation of all the fun, while Taeuber, also grinning, shook his head in disbelief.

Waves of laughter crossed the astonished and enchanted audience. It was an event to remember and it brought down the house.

PETERSON'S SYMPHONY proved to be a very rich score. The synthesizer began it with a rush of wind. Though I expected the first movement to be mysterious, it turned into a full-blown orchestral display that offered all the players both challenge and satisfaction. Most of the playing called for traditional techniques and the special effects were attractive and sympathetic. The score was both pictorial and musically substantial. The mix of traditional symphony style and new-music elements was blended well and the combined effect was one of continuity and integrity. Some of the elements were presented with enough restatement to suggest a greater significance than ultimately developed. Development, in the traditional sense, was not a strong feature of the work, though the last movement did recall much of what had gone before and did offer a strong culmination to the symphony in an A-B-A-B-A form. The synthesizer seemed to me to work better as an orchestral instrument, as in the first three movements, than as a solo intrument, as in the last. Its solo singing in the last movement seemed, by virtue of its timbre and its music, to be going counter to the more human orchestral sounds. The strings throughout the work had plenty to do and often sounded marvelous, though the winds and the brass seemed to enjoy generally richer scoring.

The second movement, lush and romantic, resembled the soft sonorities that were used to back up pop ballad singers of several years ago, but with modern and inventive melodies and themes. It featured solos by many of the players. The "squall" was very pictorial though some of its elements did not really seem to add that much to the effect.

The third movement's "earthquake," while loud and exciting, really achieved neither the nervousness nor the fright that I think the composer intended, but it did achieve rich music and dramatic effect. The composer was given a standing ovation.

Only time will reveal whether this symphony leads to bigger and better things for Peterson and whether his musical growth will lead to a greater clarity and individuality of style, but it cannot be denied that this is a rich and concentrated and strong score. Its successes outweighed its failings. It is sensitive to players in orchestras, which cannot be said for much new music, and in much of it, the synthesizer and other elements of new music work very well indeed.

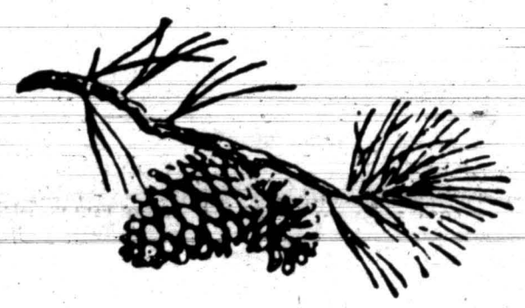
KARR RETURNED to the stage for a beautiful and subtle reading of Bruch's Kol Nidrei, displaying in this serious piece a great sensitivity to phrase and breath. Karr is really a bel canto artist in a contrabassist's clothing.

After a slightly rocky beginning, Taeuber led the orchestra in a marvelous performance of Don Juan by Richard Strauss. This is the kind of thing that flows in Taeuber's veins and it was obvious. It was a strong and clear statement, both musically and dramatically. But, to be honest, it was almost an anticlimax to what had gone before. It was like a large slice of pecan pie after a feast and so it was not heard to its best advantage. The orchestra played it well and a resonant acoustic would really have enhanced its impact.



OUR DISCOVERY

Thru our new policy of opening this gallery to the unknown artists of our community we have uncovered a treasure hidden behind the formal facade of a physicist. Born and educated abroad, Heinz Weichardt of Pebble Beach balances his work with I.B.M. with a photographic exploration of the wonders of our contemporary constructions. His feel for beauty in line, in form, in color is instinct, founded upon a sureness of structural harmony. He is artist and technician. His work ranks with the best. We feel honored to share this work with the community. The reception for this artist-photographer will be Sunday afternoon, February 5th from two to five. We look forward to your presence. It should prove a rewarding experience. Paintings by Phylis D'Angelo and Barbara Teunis will also be shown.

An exhibit of palladium photographs by Tom Millea will open with an artist's reception Friday, Feb. 3, 8-10 p.m., at Friends of Photography Gallery in Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel. The exhibit will remain on view through March 5.

Millea creates classical images using the time-consuming palladium printing process popular in the early part of the century. The process requires the photographer to coat the paper with light-sensitive materials prior to printing and produces an image with a rich warm color and subtly detailed middle tones.

A resident of Carmel for four years, Millea has taught photography at Monterey Peninsula College and for UC extension programs.

Rewarding art show at Laky Gallery

By JEHANNE B. SALINGER CARLSON

Thirteen painters from this area are represented in a non-juried show at the Laky Gallery in Carmel. Only two of these are newcomers — Leonard Han and Justine Weber. The latter, a figurative painter, commands respect by virtue of her skills and technical ability. In Kermis Dance the interest is heightened by her interesting contrast of a realistic motif, a group of folk dancers in gay costumes against a black and white geometrical background. However impeccable is her performance in her portrayal of two nude figures of pregnant women framed in a garland of stylized flowers, like a Valentine card, one knows that by the trends of today when art norms are manipulated to the point of regimentation, no one will stop long enough to examine this sensitive statement in exquisite art language. I stood long enough to appreciate it.

Han, the other new name in a Carmel gallery, is represented with a small oil entitled Beach Scene. Although a modest piece, it is delicate in color and worthy of hanging side by side with that little known but fine impressionist French painter Boudin.

Alan Parker, who was brought to eminence by the Peninsula Museum of Art, has two oils in this show. I might refer to his work as that of a painter who belongs to the school of abstract classicism. Spectrum Wave: Fugue is composed of red and blue stripes and when viewed from various angles, it creates the illusion of movement and vibrations. Such, indeed, must have been the intent of the artist.

Dick Crispo provides the excitement to this show. This [illegible] who are familiar with his work. Mind you this young social polemicist cannot be shrugged off easily. He is dead serious about his art and his concepts. If he came in contact with the art of the Mexican satirist Guadalupe Posada, Crispo must have taken example from him with gusto. Willy nilly, we will have to become accustomed to the technique which serves him well: a strong black outline of his subject with the blank spaces filled in with crude flat colors. An example of this is his Jesus' New Bow Tie. More sophisticated, artwise, is his ink and charcoal drawing titled Job's Thoughts. In both cases, Crispo unveils hypocrisy and evils of society and church quite brutally.

One never wearies of Sam Colburn's watercolors. He is a sensitive artist and in complete control of his medium. Go and enjoy the fluidity, the transparency and, in some of its passages, the evanescence of the painting he calls Surf and Persimmon. By the way, the addition of the persimmon is more than a whimsy. It is a provocative bit of interesting contrasting color.

Francisco Ferro has finally come out of hibernation. It is good that he gives us an opportunity to gloat over his paintings of birds — birds which have a way of appearing with human-like faces and are sort of visionary creatures like in the painting titled My Bosom Is Warm with Silence.

Like Chagall, from a vastly different world, Ferro draws his inspiration from his very private world of dreams and nostalgia. There is magic in the way he takes you in and how you become involved in the life of these wonderfully human birds. Their sense of solitude is expressed in their aloneness.

Janet Ament invites you to her Garden Scene; an ingratiating composition equally successful in the arrangement of the subject and in its tasteful and warm burnt sienna overall color with a note of low key blue. One is inevitably brought to think of George Braque in connection with this work. If derivation, this painting nevertheless is a credit to Miss Ament.

Holiday Scenes, two separate gouaches by Gerald Wasserman, despite their charm and competent execution, are little credit to this rare artist who has graced so many walls of so many galleries with more worthy paintings.

A fine watercolor by Virginia Conroy confirms her ability to move from one medium to the other with equal success. Birth of Earth commands attention also by its complex and fascinating life symbols. Her cryptic Genesis, in oil and acrylic, done in heavy impasto and in a monochrome, if obscure in its message, nevertheless is quite arresting.

Blue Shawl, by Victor di Gesu, is a highly decorative painting which is pleasing and competent.

The two other exhibitors are Alex Gonzales and Carolyn Berry.

The aspects of community theater

By RICHARD TYLER
Director, Sunset Community and Cultural Center

ALL THEATER is, in one sense, "community" theater. Broadway serves the most disparate community; but it's a community nonetheless, even though its constituents come from Manhattan, Ohio, Georgia or Montana on any given evening.

Regional theaters have their own communities. The Guthrie serves the entire Upper Midwest; the Alley reaches out to all of Texas and beyond. Dinner theaters, university theaters, theaters on Army posts, parks and recreation theater groups, children's theaters, church-related theater groups — each of these serves a distinct community. But it is that theater in small towns, incorporated as a nonprofit educational group, with a board of directors representing a cross section of the local citizenry, which can most easily identify its community, which it owes unique responsibilities.

If we explore the term "responsibility," words like "customer service" and "audience development" intrude to complicate the definition. What every theater, in order to exist, is responsible for is selling the tickets. Every working theater is concerned about filling its seats, because without audiences, without community, theater is by definition incomplete. But, in addition, a true community theater must be, except for the high school sports events, the chief live entertainment dispenser for its community. It also must serve as a social center, as a training agency for actors (sometimes directors) and technical personnel.

First of all, a theater owes its community "professional" performances. Whatever the vehicle, whether Simon or Shakespeare, there must be a seriousness of approach to the material, meticulous preparation of cast and crew, and unrelenting discipline on the part of the entire company. Like any other business, theater must have a good product to sell. Professional performances — theater's "product" in a community — depend upon professional-level directors. This is the second thing a theater owes its community, a professional-level artistic director. Thirdly, a theater owes its community opportunities for training. A theater should provide continuing opportunities for in-depth instruction in acting.

There is at least one theater in America which will not allow an actor to appear in its productions until he has completed two courses, one basic, one advanced, in acting technique, both provided by the theater itself. A theater school for children and another for teenagers, with serious instruction and high standards for training in all phases of theater, is another facet of theater's responsibility to its community.

Another aspect of training, the fourth on our list, lies in the theater's opportunity to educate and to elevate the taste of the community it serves. An established theater that presents only modern comedies is not only pandering to its audience, but it also is limiting its community's opportunities for experiencing the magic of the dramatic moment. Entertainment is not expressed by laughter alone. An audience that has been titillated, thrilled, mystified, made to think and truly to feel has also been royally entertained. In addition to providing a balanced variety in its season, a theater has the responsibility to do new plays, to provide playing spaces for good new plays by local or regional playwrights. In producing an untried script, the director, technical staff and actors have the challenge of creating instead of re-creating; the playwright, working in rehearsal with the company, sees and corrects his mistakes; the local audience has the excitement of attending a premiere. And everyone learns tremendously from the experience. Carmel is making such an experience possible. The winning playwright of the First Annual Playwriting Competition will be announced soon.

Compromise sought in officer's claim

Parties involved in the State Worker's Compensation Appeals Board claims filed in March 1977 by retiring Carmel Police Sergeant Walter P. Boyle are working on an undisclosed cash settlement, according to Emile Serres, the appeals board judge.

A compromise must be filed within 60 days, Serres said.

Boyle, 56, filed for unspecified benefits, claiming his job gave him an ulcer, aggravated a back condition and left him partly deaf. He will retire on Feb. 15 after 21 years on the force.

A hearing scheduled before Judge Serres Jan. 25 was adjourned when representatives from the city of Carmel, the California State Insurance Fund and Boyle's attorney, Harold L. Greene of Encino, agreed to work toward a compromise.

Sick seal

Beachfront dwellers in Carmel occasionally heard Ralph bark, but as the week were on, the sick baby elephant seal grew listless. On Sunday, marine mammal specialists removed Ralph from his nest on the beach, at the foot of 10th Street. (Dal Kaller photo)

AT THE OPENING were Mrs. George Thorngate IV, president of the Docent Council, and Mrs. Saul Weingarten. The event was hosted Saturday afternoon at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art.

Ritschel room is opened

On Saturday, the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art paid special tribute to the late William Ritschel, the painter from Carmel Highlands who died in 1949.

The museum directors opened a room and named [illegible] German immigrant who painted marine settings.

Ritschel was the only American to be a three-time winner of the Ranger Prize, given by the National Academy of Design. In 1918, he and his wife, the former Nora Havel, moved into a stone house in the Highlands. The room was opened with a bequest from his widow.

"Local oldtimers remember him garbed in a flowered sarong, perched on cypress-covered cliffs with brushes and easel. His vigor and humor made him ride high on the crest of his life with a zest that gave him no time to be concerned with material accumulations," wrote Helen Spangenberg, one of his biographers.

MRS. PETER Sherman and Diana Hardy enjoy an amiable chat at the opening of the William Ritschel Room. (Del Kaller photos)

Sick baby seal taken to Marin for medical treatment

Stray elephant seal found ill on Carmel Beach is driven on Sunday to marine animal center

By JIM BARRETT

RALPH, THE sick and underweight baby elephant seal that strayed onto Carmel Beach 12 days ago, is safe in the hands of marine mammal experts near San Francisco.

"He shows the early signs of a skin disease that they get when they start molting," said his new keeper, Marc Weber. Weber, 20, is the animal curator at the California Marine Mammal Center, a privately supported treatment facility in Marin County. Volunteers from the center picked up Ralph on Sunday.

"We are treating him with an antibiotic to guard against any systemic infection. We will keep him for a month or a month and a half, depending on his condition, then release him along the central California coastline," Weber said Monday.

Nicknamed by volunteers at the mammal center, Ralph strayed onto the beach Sunday, Jan. 22, and authorities began receiving an increasing number of inquiries as the week went on.

"I had one of my men check him every day," said Lieutenant Ken Boettcher of the State Fish and Game Department in Monterey.

"Finally, on Sunday, a woman who lived down by the beach called and said his condition seemed to be deteriorating. I asked her to stay with the baby seal and I would call the Marine Mammal Center to see if they could pick him up," Boettcher explained.

"I WENT DOWN there about 9:30 in the morning," said Gabrielle Goffinet, the woman who was Ralph's "babysitter" on Sunday.

"I had seen him two or three days before and something told me something was wrong. He was underweight and he looked sick. By Sunday, he was heaving just trying to breathe and there was spittle coming out of his nose," Miss Goffinet said. She stayed with Ralph until the volunteers put him into a specially designed aluminum cage, hoisted the five-foot long, 150-pound baby in the bed of their truck and departed on the three-hour ride to the center's treatment center in the Golden Gate National Recreation Reserve north of San Francisco. He and another baby, found on the Mendocino seashore with the same malady, are being treated by volunteer veterinarians.

Adult elephant seals mate in December, January and February, according to Weber. Babies like Ralph, a yearling, are shunned by the adults and often stray from the adult population during the mating season, according to Dr. Ralph Buchsbaum, an expert on invertebrate biology from Pacific Grove. He said babies actually can be harmed by adults attempting the highly important mating function. The docile elephant seal once was hunted up and down the California coast, but today it is a species protected by Federal wildlife laws.

Hundreds of adult elephant seals mate at Ano Nuevo Island, a jutting hunk of rock off the beach of the same name situated 30 miles north of Santa Cruz.

SPEAKING OF Miss Goffinet, Weber said, "I am really grateful to her. She kept the curious away and she gave him a bit of quiet."

Boettcher, of the Fish and Game Department, said baby seals could stray onto local beaches until the summer and he stressed that they should not be disturbed.

"Leave them alone. Call us. Keep your dog away," was his advice. A marine biologist with the department, Jim Hardwick, said the seals can live for six weeks without food or water.

The California Marine Mammal Center is a nonprofit, tax-exempt organization and it operates on donations, said Weber. Donations should be sent in care of the Marin Headlands Ranger Station, Building 1050, Ft. Cronkhite 94965.

'Huachinango' with the scales

By PHYLLIS JERVEY

We are lucky to have Thayer Soule with us again for his narrated Explorama film at Sunset Center in Carmel. The film starts at 8:15 p.m. next Thursday and it is entitled Mexico: Wonderful Mexico.

Soule has been traveling most of his life. His father was an artist, his mother a world traveler. He sat still long enough to earn a degree at Harvard University with honors in language, geographical studies and public speaking. It was at the age of seven, after he had seen Mountains of the Moon, that Thayer decided to become a lecturer.

To quote Soule: "Mexico is a travelers' delight, a land of friendly people and lilting music." He has made eight major films there, each blessed with great sights and fascinating people. In Wonderful Mexico, we shall see that part of Mexico that is fundamentally Indian. At Chichen Itza, a Mayan ceremonial center on the Yucatan peninsula, life centers around the family. The Montejo House, where today the 16th generation of a conquistador's family lives, will be shown and we will ride in a horse-drawn "calesa" down the main boulevard.

From Carmel to Mexico City (leave off the "ciudad" after arrival because it is Mexico in the eyes of residents). My husband, son and I spent three lively months in San Angel, a chic suburb of Mexico City with three U.S. Army bachelor officers who had leased a modern villa next to the home of Diego Rivera, the famous muralist.

Their Indian-Mexican maid-cook, Conchita, a flighty person, was forever running to the mercado just before breakfast for four eggs. But in the middle of her scrambled eggs, Conchita escaped and would again return with a quarter kilo of coffee, sugar and butter in case the Americanos asked for a second cup.

One evening that I shall never forget, the bachelors had invited a lovely senorita to dine with us, her father being a high governmental official.

At the dinner table, which I had decorated with delicate blossoms and hand-tinted homemade candles, we had claret consomme, which I had prepared ahead of time.

Then Conchita came carrying a large heated platter. "Huachinango," she announced proudly.

It was a large red snapper surrounded by avocado slivers dipped in lime juice. The fish was beautifully glazed and delicately browned. But to our dismay it had never been scaled. Can you imagine how our teeth felt?

Backgammon

Black rolls 4-1. How should he play?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

Whatever Black does, he will have to leave a blot. Therefore, he may as well play the 4 by bringing a man from his 9-point to his 5-point. That at least brings another man into his home board. The only question is how to play the 1.

When you have to leave a direct shot, the closer your man is to the enemy, the fewer shots your opponent will have. Applying that principle, Black should use the 1 to advance his blot to the 8-point. On that point White can hit only with a 4, 3-1 or 2-2 — a total of 14 combinations that hit while 22 miss.(As against that, on the 9-point Black can be hit with all 5's, 3-2 or 4-1 — a total of 15 combinations.)

However, there is a play which I feel offers Black an even better chance. He can use the 1 to hit the White blot on his 4-point. While that leaves two blots for the moment, it actually reduces the number of combinations with which White can hit a blot.

Since he has a man on the bar, White can hit one of the Black blots only if he rolls a 4 or specifically 6-3, a total of 13 combinations. The move has other advantages — it also makes it more likely that Black will be able to play his next rolls more safely.

First, it is by no means certain that White will reenter — he is only a 5-to-4 favorite to come in. And if he comes in with a 6 and anything but a 3, Black will almost certainly be able to pass the White man on his 6-point. That will enable him to bear off safely and win the game unless White comes up with a string of useful doublets.

OCEAN AVENUE HAD recently been paved when this picture was taken, sometime in the 1920s. MILK PRICES TUMBLE

Milk goes down again — in price. On the first of this month, notices were sent to all customers of the Carmel Dairy Depot, owned by R. Erickson, that Grade A Pasteurized Salinas Valley milk would be 12 cents a quart, 7 cents a pint, with cream reduced in proportion.

13 UNLUCKY? NOT FOR THE 'PINE CONE'

Today is the 13th birthday of the Pine Cone. On Feb. 3, 1915, the first edition of 200 copies was run off the press and circulated among the 400 Carmelites who made up the village of Carmel. It is a familiar story to the oldtimer, but should be of interest to the Carmelites of today, and perhaps will bring pleasant memories of the time when streets were unpaved, all the trees growing in their appointed places, and not a highway sign in place.

A FEMININE CITY COUNCIL

It is likely that the Woman's Club will have one or more candidates — women candidates — for the City Council at the election this spring. The theory is that the greater percentage of Carmel's population, as well as the larger half of its electorate, is feminine, and that it is entitled to representation.

Nothing could be fairer. There are three places on the council to be filled, which is probably about the right proportion to grant the feminine majority. We suggest that women candidates be named for all these offices.

PLAN BOARD STATUS IN JEOPARDY

At the moment, Carmel's seven-member planning commission consists of five members. By the end of next week, it may be boosted to nine or reduced to none, if rumored mass resignation of the remaining members takes place.

The unhappy situation is the result of Mayor Horace Lyon's refusal at Wednesday night's council meeting to name appointees to fill the vacancies created by the expired terms of Planning Commission Chairman P. A. McCrerry and Mrs. Comstock, until all members of the City Council can be present to vote. Councilman Francis Whitaker is away on a skiing expedition to Sun Valley and isn't expected back until next week.

THREE HAVE FILED FOR COUNCIL

With election time drawing near (April 9), it is noted that the terms of three councilmen, one clerk and one treasurer will expire. So far Eben Whittlesey, Gunnar Norberg and Frank Falge have filed papers for the council. Only Mayor Steve Grant has not declared.

Councilman Whittlesey, now vice mayor and former mayor, has the distinction of holding the record number of votes cast for a particular councilman. Incumbent Gunnar Norberg is the lone dissenter of the motel and Sunset ordinances.

MARIJUANA USE DISCUSSED AT ROTARY

A medical director from the Monterey County Health Department and two young drug users spoke at Wednesday's Carmel Rotary Club luncheon and told the Rotarians:

- Up to 30 per cent of Monterey Peninsula high school students have used or are using marijuana.
- Pure marijuana is much stronger than that generally available now and will cause severe effects for days after use.
- Because of recent unpleasant experiences and revelations, very few young people use the so-called harder drugs.
- Marijuana cost is about 3 cents a cigarette but occasional users obtain it without cost.

PAVEMENT GROUNDED

The City Council voted last night to transfer the $2,000 set aside for the possibility of paving the north playground at Sunset Center to the capital outlay fund.

JEFFERS FAMILY RETURNING

Mr. and Mrs. Donnan Jeffers and Donnan Jr. and Robin returned to Carmel early in March to occupy their home at Tor House, built by Donnan's famous poet father, the late Robinson Jeffers.

1930 Mack truck

Cachagua wants vintage fire truck

A 50-year-old Carmel fire truck that has been stored at five different sites in the past 10 years could end up back in the line of duty again.

The Carmel City Council will consider the fate of the department's 1930 Mack Truck on Monday. The volunteer fire department in the Cachagua area, 30 miles southeast of Carmel, has requested use of the fire engine with no liability to Carmel.

"It could never be used as a first-line engine in Carmel anymore," according to Assistant Fire Chief Vern Allred. He said the pump is no longer effective.

The department "retired" the engine in 1966, according to Allred. La Playa hotel stored the truck at no charge for five years. The truck has since been stored in a fire department stall, at the Forest Theater and currently at a site off Carmel Valley Road.

Residents near the Forest Theater complained about the engine, which was vandalized while it was stored there, Allred said.

The engine still has "good power" and a top speed of 55 miles per hour, said Allred. The city would retain ownership of the truck and could call it back any time, the assistant chief added.

Workshop for tots scheduled

A series of workshops for two- and three-year-olds will be offered during February in Carmel by Rose Stetler, an early childhood consultant.

The one-hour workshops are scheduled each Wednesday and Friday of the month at 9 a.m. They will be conducted at the Learning Company, Fifth and Junipero. The fee for the month is $25.

"The workshops are designed to aid the development of young children with little or no experience with other children outside the home," according to a workshop description.

Reservations are advised and can be obtained by telephoning 624-0157.

We make other money green with envy.

If there's one thing all economists agree on it's this: Money is happiest when it's safe, and when it's growing.

Which are exactly the conditions we provide at Northern California Savings.

Deposits are insured by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., which keeps them safe. And they keep growing, because in addition to our Regular Savings, we have all of the high yield Certificate Accounts. It depends only on how much you wish to save, and for how long.

$20,000, in six years, can become $31,838.63 when held in a 7.75% annual rate account with daily compounded interest left to accumulate.*

So if your money isn't earning quite that much, and you suspect it isn't entirely happy where it is, you know what to do.

We'll make it positively ecstatic!

*Federal regulations require a substantial interest penalty for premature withdrawal from any certificate.

Undefeated Padres seize league lead

By JAY POSNER

CLOBBERING Pacific Grove 61-44 earlier in the week and trouncing King City 65-38 on Friday night, the Carmel High School Padres have taken undisputed possession of first place.

Against the King City Mustangs, Carmel had all 14 players in uniform for the first time since Dec. 15 and Coach Joe Feldeisen used all of them as the Padres built up a 57-24 lead midway through the final quarter.

The Padre defense was so dominant that the Mustangs could manage only three points in the first quarter, 11 by halftime and only 18 by the end of the third quarter. King City hit only 12 field goals all night, six of them coming in the final quarter when the Mustangs scored 20 points. For the evening, King City was 12 for 52 from the floor for 23 per cent. On the free throw line, the Mustangs converted only 14 of 23 for 60.8 per cent.

On the other hand, Carmel hit 26 of 54 from the floor, 48.1 per cent, and the Padres canned 13 of 17 free throws for a 76.5 per cent average.

John Frincke led the Padres with 15 points and John Lucido popped in 13. Tom Frincke also was in double figures as he scored 10 points. Joe Sigrist led King City with 18 points, but 10 of those came in the fourth quarter against the Padre substitutes.

The Padres had Tuesday off, but they travel to Gonzales Friday night to take on the Spartans..

Carmel also won both early games as the junior varsity downed King City 49-40 and the freshman squad won 31-21. Art Strum led the JVs with 15 points and Greg Raynes paced the freshmen with 12 points.

At Pacific Grove on Jan. 24, the Padre full-court press caused four of the Breakers' seven turnovers in the first half. The Padres turned the ball over only twice in the first two quarters as they built a 25-14 lead.

The Padres were 22-45 from the field for 48.9 per cent, while P.G. finished at 18-45 for an average of 40 per cent.

John Frincke led the Padres with 20 points as he hit eight of 14 field goal attempts including a blistering seven for eight after a one for six first quarter. Tom Frincke added 17 points by hitting eight of 15 field goals after a cold one for four in the first period. Dave Hughes led P.G. with 11 points and Keith Nicks added 10.

The two schools split the preliminary games, Carmel winning the JV game 41-37 and the Breakers taking the freshmen contest 46-33. Adam Sherburne led the JVs with 17 points and Greg Raynes scored 15 to pace the Padre freshmen.

YMCA seeks players for hoop league

Players for a YMCA-sponsored youth basketball team in the Carmel area are being sought for league play scheduled to begin Saturday.

Membership is open to boys and girls aged eight to 18, according to Joe Barnes, director of the league for the Monterey Peninsula YMCA. Teams are coeducational. "The teams operate with emphasis on sportsmanship and allow every boy and girl an equal chance to play," he said.

There are 10 teams formed on the Peninsula, he said. The coach of the Carmel team is Terry Bissell, a YMCA volunteer.

There is a $7.50 fee to cover the cost of uniforms. For more information, telephone the YMCA at 373-4166.

Three elections in three months may confront voters from Carmel

Carmel voters may have to go to the polls three times in three months unless the state legislature approves a bill allowing the consolidation of two of those ballots.

The benefits of consolidation include not only a better voter turnout, but also a savings of $13,000, according to Russ Harlan, assistant to the county registrar of voters.

Under a current bill, the vote to consider formation of the Peninsula Water Management District must be conducted 75 to 100 days after Jan. 1, said Harlan. This would require an election on April 11.

"The legislature will have to approve an extension to 75 to 180 days in order for the April ballot to be consolidated with the June 7 primary," said Harlan. "The cost of a separate election, which would be held by mail, would be approximately $26,000.

"If consolidated with the June primary, the cost to voters for this proposal would amount to $13,000," he said.

On March 7, voters will be asked to fill three seats on the Carmel City Council. Another ballot issue will decide whether the superintendent of county schools should be an elected position.

The March ballot will cost about 70 cents per registered voter, said Harlan. The June primary may run as high as $1.60 per voter. This increased cost is due to the larger number of ballots and the increased printing costs.

Honor students listed at UCSB

Two Carmel students, both seniors at UC Santa Barbara, have been named to the dean's list for the fall quarter, the university has announced.

Charles Cooper Dunn is a zoology major who transferred from Carleton College. Kathleen Mary Menczkowski is a sociology major who formerly attended Monterey Peninsula College.

Used garments pose problem for planners

What is the difference between a garment that is used and one that is "collectable"?

The Carmel Planning Commission isn't sure. But if and when the City Hall staff ever figures it out, a local boutique may have to remove some of its stock.

Essence Boutique, San Carlos and Seventh, is selling "used clothing" along with its stock of new clothes, according to Planning Commissioner Eileen Thompson.

These used items are "scattered about the racks," she told the commission on Wednesday, Jan. 22.

City Attorney George Brehmer said stores that sell used garments are outlawed in Carmel because they could "depreciate" the commercial district.

"Used clothing may be sold provided it is more valuable than just something to wear," Brehmer said.

The commission turned the matter over to the City Hall staff for review. The store had no comment.

William Doolittle is elected president of Citizen Committee

William Doolittle has been elected the new president of the Carmel Citizens Committee board of directors. He succeeds General Ernest F. Easterbrook.

Two new board members also were added in January. They are Mrs. Ben Harrell and Mrs. J. L. Hughes.

Officers of the board also were elected. They are Dr. Francis H. Herrick, vice president; Joseph Lysle, treasurer; Mrs. Eugene Hammond, secretary. Other members are Lenore Foster, Mrs. Squire Hurst and Frank Lloyd.

The nonpartisan civic group also announced that it will host a "candidates' night" Feb. 16 for the five active candidates in the March 7 elections for the Carmel City Council. The event is scheduled at All Saints' Episcopal Church at 7:30 p.m.

Three terms to expire in June

The Carmel Community and Cultural Commission appointed an ad hoc committee Tuesday, Jan. 24, to make recommendations to the City Council about appointments to the commission.

Commissioner Alison Schwyzer was named chairman of the committee. Commissioners Elizabeth Szold and Bernard VanHorne also were named to the committee.

The Cultural Commission will have three vacancies to fill in June, when the terms of Lewis Heniford, James Gilman and Mrs. Schwyzer are scheduled to expire.

CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA
NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN to all persons having any interest in the matter, that the City Council of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, California, will conduct a Public Hearing in the Council Chambers of said City on Monte Verde between Ocean and Seventh Avenues on Monday, February 14, 1978, at the hour of 8:00 p.m., or as soon thereafter as interested persons may be heard, to consider:

The report of the Planning Commission recommending the adoption of an ordinance which proposes the creation of a new zoning district called R-4 which would allow for additional residential uses with limited commercial activity. The new R-4 zone is intended to replace zones for lands now zoned commercial to provide a buffer zone between the residential and commercial districts.

The adoption of the ordinance creating the R-4 district will not result in the changing of the zoning districts for any existing land. The Planning Commission will recommend to the City Council at a later time land to be rezoned to R-4. That land now zoned C-2 will probably be recommended to the Council for rezoning to R-4. Thus, all persons having an interest in C-2 land or any other land which might be rezoned to R-4 may appear and be heard.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that the aforesaid Public Hearing will be held and this Notice is given pursuant to Government Code Sections 65854 and 65856.

Farrell's touch

By the Rev. LARRY FARRELL

O Lord, at some time or other, we discover that life isn't fair. For example, some folks like myself stay fat, not pleasingly plump, but fat, while drinking diet Coke and Fresca — forswearing John Barleycorn in all his tempting guises, while others swill steins of beer, flagons of wine, three martinis for lunch and milkshakes for snacks, yet they stay sleek, slim and fashionably thin.

Why is it that those who don't water have roses while the pruners, the weeders and the sprayers wind up having blight?

Is this your week, O Lord, to listen to gripes or do we have to wait for the final judgment to see justice done? Finally, O Lord, we are told that it is better to light one candle than to curse the darkness. O Lord, please forgive us if we use a few choice curses before we light that candle.

Lecture about philosopher

"Patterns of Change in Teilhard de Chardin" is the topic of a lecture Saturday by Sister Catherine Knudsen, a professor of philosophy at Gavilan College.

Her lecture will be hosted by the Cherry Foundation and it will be given at the foundation meeting hall, Fourth and Guadalupe.

The lecture begins at 10 a.m. and admission is free.

Well, whaddya want?

NO, IT'S NOT a ground hog, but it's the best we could find. So here's one of the pigs Bob Wilson keeps in Carmel Valley. Today, of course, is Ground Hog's Day and did Bob's pig see his shadow? Well, it didn't particularly care but there was sun so, to the superstitious, that means six more weeks of winter. (George T. C. Smith photo)

Avoid 'tidy look' in your garden

By GREGORY D'AMBROSIO
Carmel City Forester

HOW DO you usually water your trees and plants? Most people flood them or hose the ground around the trunk thinking that drenching the area will satisfy the plant's moisture requirements. This may give you peace of mind, but in most cases the plant hasn't been helped much.

Out on a limb

What then should you do to help out?

Try to get the idea of the tidy, raked look out of your mind. Leaves, pine needles and other vegetable materials are essential to your plant's well-being. Turning the soil over occasionally and mixing these materials into the soil will develop a loose, well-aerated medium that will accept water readily. In the wild, trees and shrubs grow well under these natural conditions and rarely show drought stress during summer months. The quantity of water you use will be significantly reduced. Nature, in most cases, will supply the nutrients by breaking down the organic materials that have been mulched into the soil. Slow or gradual release of essential nutrients is far better for your plant than a "quick shot in the branch" that is provided by commercial fertilizers. Commercial fertilizer mixtures are important for supplemental uses, but if they are not needed, there is no sense in giving the plant a big boost that may not be continued throughout its life.

A close look at your plants during rainy periods will reveal several interesting qualities they have for providing optimum water absorption and penetration of surrounding soil. Rains in this area can be intense, resulting in large amounts of runoff. The water that falls on the ground during the first showers will run off rapidly, because the soil surface is coated with a dust layer that repels water absorption. After this dust layer has been broken down, future rains will begin to penetrate. Mulching soils around your plants will help absorb those first downpours.

How then will a tree or plant increase water penetration? Rain hits the leaves, branches and bark of the plant. The water clings to the plant parts until a reservoir has developed. When the water's weight and capacity is too great for the plant, gradual runoff from the leaves to the branches to the trunk begins. Over a period of several hours or days, the water slowly drips and runs off the trunk onto the soil. This extremely slow runoff can be compared to the new drip irrigation systems now being promoted as water-saving sprinkler systems. Soil absorption is greater, runoff is insignificant, and the soil's saturation point is reached much sooner than in soils where all vegetable material has been removed or plants are absent.

We can and should learn important lessons from plants. Plants are the true water conservationists and their systems and methods are a key to future improvements in the homeowner's gardening techniques.

The House of the Thirteen Lamps
on Camino Real in Carmel

Statistics are usually a bore, but these will give you an idea of the scale and luxury of this extraordinary, brand new house.

There really are 13 burnished brass carriage lamps, of tasteful design, which highlight the front, side and rear. There are 76 cabinet doors, 16 cabinet drawers and 15 closet doors, all ash and all dark-stained. There are 12 thermostats for highly selective electric heating.

There are 3 bedrooms, including 2 master suites; 3½ baths; and two each of fireplaces, garage spaces with Genie doors, overhanging front balconies and built-in ovens . . . plus a microwave oven. In the one only category are 1 entrance hall, upstairs hall, living room, dining room, kitchen, breakfast room, library or den, and paved, private rear terrace.

To complete the numbers, this is 2700 sq. ft. of living space on nearly 2 Carmel lots within 2 blocks of Ocean Avenue and 3 blocks of the beach.

What the numbers do not show is the remarkable finish work and craftsmanship. For instance, all the downstairs rooms have 8 foot white ceilings crossed by a grid of 4 x 4 dark fir beams. Floors throughout, except the entrance hall and kitchen, are covered by creamy deep pile carpet . . . even the bathrooms. Counter tops in kitchen and baths are rich, dark ceramic tile. And all the bath fixtures are finished in gold.

The ceilings in the upstairs bedrooms reveal massive fir crossbeams traversed by 2 x 8 natural pine planks. All the windows are steel framed, some picture style, some divided into vertical panes.

Two master suites? Yes, that's true. The north bedroom, 18 x 22, and bath is guest quarters with its own balcony over-looking Carmel Bay, no connection upstairs, and its own private entrance up a tiled staircase from the rear terrace. It can be reached through the breakfast room, or closed off. The south bedroom, 15 x 12, has its own bath and dressing area, fireplace, and a wider balcony with view of the sea. The middle bedroom is almost a duplicate.

You'll find the House of the Thirteen Lamps just north of 8th, second house on the east side, diagonally across from the La Playa Hotel. Call 624-1838 for a personal tour. The price is $260,000.

FRACTURED FAIRY TALE
TWO GENTLEMEN FARMERS

Once upon a time in the beautiful Valley of Carmel, there lived two Gentlemen Farmers (Mr. Green and Mr. Thumb). Mr. Green lived just East of Laureles Grade in a beautiful four-bedroom California Ranch home. Each morning he would swim outdoors in the heated pool and watch the sun rise over the mountain. Then, in the afternoon, Mr. Green would walk his horses completely around the level acre of ground. Now, one summer day, Mr. Thumb noticed how much Mr. Green was enjoying Carmel Valley life, so he purchased a level acre of ground just a few miles West of Mr. Green and built himself a four-bedroom California Ranch home with a heated swimming pool. Mr. Thumb also planted an orchard and built a three-room guest house so all of his friends from the Foggy Coast could visit and enjoy the sunshine. Fortunately this story has a happy ending because both of these fine Gentlemen Farmers have decided to sell and give others the opportunity to enjoy the good life of Carmel Valley. We are sure either of these fine four-bedroom homes will enable you to live happily ever after.
